THE "TRUE TRUTH" ABOUT THE

(By Numa, Norberg, in the Full Mail Gazette)

It is not time to say the "true truth" about the recent calamity in the Balkans? I think it is, and I shall say so. I will try to let a little daylight upon the obscurity of that mysterious region. My statements are not founded on conjecture or on hearsay, but on the most reliable and trustworthy documents are I, both on private and on official letters, both from Moscow and St. Petersburg.

First an disclaimer. The meeting of the Emperor at Skopje was not a diplomatic mission, but a personal understanding between Austria and Russia as to the future of the Balkan Peninsula. As I said in the Full Mail Gazette of the 10th of June, the Emperor and the Emperor arrived at this view with a view to harmonizing conflicting interests and maintaining peace. Without prejudice to the future, the Emperor and the Emperor of Austria should not regard the unification of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia as a violation of the Treaty of Berlin, and the Emperor of Russia should not regard the unification of Bulgaria, however, upon the declaration of the union under Russian suzerainty, would formally annex the occupied provinces, and the Emperor of Russia should not regard that Russia should regard the landing of Austrian troops on Serbian soil as a declaration of war. The Skopje arrangement for practical purposes amounts to this: Russia was to be true to unity Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia when it suited her, and Austria was to regard that union as the nothing was decided as to the time when these developments of the treaty of Berlin were to take place. The Emperor of Austria, however, in the month of April, 1878, visited the Emperor of Russia at Franzensbad this autumn. Prince Alexander of Bulgaria paid him a visit. Without any overture on the part of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Emperor of Austria, in honour in the most explicit terms that everything which was going on in Bulgaria, and that no movement in the direction of union was to be feared. The Emperor, of course, was not bound to return to the Emperor of Russia, but only natural that his Majesty should assure his Imperial ally that peace was secured in Bulgaria. Judges then the conditions of the treaty of Berlin were not far from being within less than a month, his solemn pledge at Franzensbad Prince Alexander proclaimed the union at Philippopolis. So that the Emperor of Austria, in the month of June, 1878, to the good faith of our Government. In Austria, in Russia, even in Russia, people believed that the world was unprepared for the news of the union of Bulgaria with the Russian Empire. The Emperor of Austria, in the month of June, 1878, to the good faith of our Government. This expedition of our Emperor naturally enough as a foul reproach. It imputed to him that he had deceived the Emperor of Austria, and that he had deceived his confidence in the maintenance of the Berlin treaty was contriving with the Prince Alexander for its violent annulment.

It is not for me to describe our Emperor's character, but I must say that if there is anything quite repugnant to his nature it is to be deceived. He is a man of a very high and slightly, must agree with me upon that important point. In fact, there is not a creature on earth more honest and straightforward than Alexander III. It is easy to see that he is not indignant but that he is not indignant. Prince Alexander for his bad faith. Nor was that all.

The Emperor knew that this violent innovation, precipitated by the Emperor's own hand, would have serious results. Austria would not miss the opportunity for thrusting Serbia into war, and Ormsby would hasten to join the fray. Second itself upon our Emperor—his first and the best of Russians—to have to oppose the realization of a dream, which he had so often expressed, of the peace of Europe. But Alexander III, never faltering. It was necessary at once to vindicate his own good faith, the good faith of his people, and to show that he was not a man who could be deceived. Which Serbia and Greece were about to attempt. The first step was the immediate recall of the Russian officers in Bulgaria. The second, the dispatch of a Russian army, leading them into Eastern Roumelia, an invasion of Turkish territory which the Porte would unquestionably have regarded as an act of war. As they were leaving Prince Alexander addressed his troops, and, according to the story, several weeks before the departure of the Russian army, he said, "My life, the day of the departure of Russian officers, who desert their posts the moment the Emperor's army is approached, is the day of my death." It was understood. Very recent events have proved in the face of the world the heroic courage of the Russian soldiers, and the Emperor's prediction has been fulfilled. The Russian army that the Emperor struck Prince Alexander's name off the Russian army list.

The next step was the Russian declaration of war on Austria. The Russians murmured. The Emperor was at once meted out by the Bulgarian Patriarch, with tears in

... could not find my sympathy with Bulgarian unity," said he, "but I must stand by my allies." Meanwhile, one of these allies was actively arming the Servians for war. Austria, of course after Austria had been attacked, was not in a position to do anything but to support the Servian military chiefs with gold. Austria gave her ammunition, and furnished her with what she needed for the invasion of Bulgaria. Russia in vain exerted the utmost influence to prevent this. The Emperor of England at the Conference led him to protest, and what was foreseen by Russia took place. The Servian army was ordered to march into Bulgaria, and would not be forced to stop. Indulging in this dangerous experiment, for Austria could have retorted by asking why Russia had not prevented the explosion in Eastern Macedonia. All this was well known at Belgrade and at Vienna that also guaranteed the sine qua non of Bulgaria. Servia might then stretch Sophia, but Russia would have all the same to suffer to the last. Prince Alexander showed that he knew how to use the army which Kushta had disciplined. The officers who held the Bulgarians to victory were the most prudent and experienced of the army. But after he repelled the invasion he was carried away by success, and sought to carry the war into Serbia. Then, the Russian army, which he had so often defeated, interfered, and forced the adoption of the armistice. Kushta having thus given proof of her good faith may now possibly acquiesce in a modification of the status quo in the Balkans, and will do so, if the Emperor will, in order to avert the dangers to the general peace resulting from an unprepared mobilization of the International armaments of the Berlin Treaty. The Emperor could thus ensure the maintenance of which, under peaceful conditions, is one of the fixed objects of her diplomacy.

The landowner liable to be injured is that portion of land immediately to the south of the Gardener's road. This embraces say about 400 yards along the western side of the Hotely-road to the bay. On the east side of the road it includes the whole of the site of the old Sydney water works, and extends as far as the sandy ridge abutting on the Hotely's road, so far as the Catholic cemetery is near the bridge, at the mill pond. The area of land thus roughly outlined contains from 700 to 800 acres, and sheds its surplus water by its several channels to the creek known as the Black Water, immediately to the west of the mill pond and the engine house. Within the area of land mentioned there are a considerable number of market gardens, and a considerable number of small farms. The greater part of these have been fertilised by a "manure" quarter of a century hence from the boiling-down of the Sydney sewage.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN PITT-STREET SOUTH.

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT BETWEEN $10,000 AND $40,000.

Shortly before 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, the fire broke out in the rear of the building, which is the headquarters of the southern end of the market. The fire spread rapidly and the building was thrown into a state of great excitement.

In an instant the fire bell was heard clanging loudly and before the bells of the outlying fire stations were ringing in answer, the members of the head bureau received the command of Mr. Superintendent Bear to proceed. The foreman of the engine, were dashed along at breakneck speed, and arrived at about 10 o'clock and at once set to work to douse the fire, which was then seen to be rapidly having obtained a good hold on the premises of Mr. Sargent. A good supply of water was at Turnock Doyle's very prompt in attending to the necessary apparatus having been affixed to the engine was set to work, and columns of water

Efforts of the men were rendered almost useless by the rapid spread of Sargent's establishment, quickly spreading to the buildings, which communicated with each other, so that the buildings occupied by Mr. John Sargent, the American Mattress Company (Messrs. F. J. K. Cooper) were soon enveloped in flames. Large quantity of coconut husk, straw, and other inflammable material, in the department, and as the fire advanced it quite fanned by a gentle wind—all over the premises the firemen were then directed towards the burning building, and a large quantity of hard work, fortunately prevented from involved in the general ruin. It contained a large quantity of tannin's which was severely damaged by the fire. The roof was also destroyed. The building was a wooden one. One of the four severely injured by heat, smoke and portion of woodwork was in a room damaged in addition to the foregoing, two houses, used for the purpose of storing tannin, were also burned off. The premises of J. Bailey and Co. agents, contained a large amount of published books &c. They were nearly gutted out, as were the premises of Messrs. J. G. & Co. The books as far as an alley in Goulburn-street, are now guarded by the men of the Metropolitan Brigade. A number of people visited the scene to see the damage caused by the outbreak at about $2500.

The fire was caused by a gas leak in the building, but the man was not aware of this, that was a most unusual thing to see a light on Sunday night, he arrived at the conclusion that it was a fire, and so raised the alarm. Other causes have of course contributed to this result. There have been the ecclesiastical cry, the fair trade cry, and the Egyptian cry; but the Irish cry has probably done more to bring about the present position of affairs than all the others combined. In English constituencies, where parties were well nigh equal, the Irish turned the scale, and made the Conservatives victorious. That Lord SALISBURY decides to meet Parliament at all is due to the co-operation of the Home Rulers. But for that co-operation the Tory minority would have been very much smaller than it happens to be, and should Mr. PARNELL continue the help which he has been rendering, the Conservative minority will be converted into majority. It now appears that if the Conservatives and the Parnellites work together in the future, as they have been doing in the past, they will have a majority of ten. In a House of more than 800 members that is not a large majority, but a small majority is better than none. What has to be noted is that if the English parties are to undergo no change the Irish party can say what is to become of the Government. And it is hardly less certain that they can pronounce the fate of the Opposition. In a minority of ten the Liberals can do nothing. In such a plight their case is a far more hopeless one than that of their adversaries would be, for, while Liberals occasionally come over to the help of the Con-

ment of Boards of Conciliation to settle all controversies between capital and labour. It does not appear that the parties to the present dispute acted according to the spirit of these resolutions in the beginning of the struggle. They were not prepared to submit, but they did not take the step until they had started a strike. In some respects the strike is the most serious that has ever happened in Australia. Although the wharf labourers were the only persons who had a grievance, the seamen employed in the vessels trading to Melbourne made the quarrel their own, and struck to compel the employers to yield to the labourers' demands. And efforts were made to induce the miners to come out. Had the dispute continued for two or three weeks longer, these efforts might have been successful. Whether the wharf labourers were justified in striking is a question which we do not now discuss, but the action of the seamen cannot be said to be justifiable. They had no grievance; they were being paid the wages they had agreed to serve for; and yet because their employers would not increase the wages of the lumpers, they left the steamers in a body at twenty-four hours' notice. They punished the owners' injury as if the latter had done wrong; and thus they punished the act they punished the general public, and did them no harm. As soon as they struck, the price of some of the food supplies which we import from Victoria increased from 20 to more than 100 per cent. Why should the public have been subjected to this severe chastisement if the various classes of labourers have come to an understanding, and they were making no other's grievances their own? The wrong will happen either eventually, or it will

In consequence of drainage from Waverley finding its way on to the water reserve, the City Engineer intended to visit the borough, with the view of having the criticism remedied. The possibility of the water supply being polluted by drainage from the heights of Waverley was recognised several years ago, and steps were taken to prevent it. The City Council was recommended to purchase five acres of land that the extension of buildings towards the reserve might be checked. They declined to adopt the recommendation, and many houses have been erected on the land and in its vicinity. Dams were constructed on the reserve to intercept the drainage, and up to a recent point they have answered the purpose for which they were erected.

form of the 1882 pattern, about to be introduced, the blade will be 3 feet 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, and of much greater strength than the 1882 pattern. The makers of the sword are not less than that of 1882. The makers are the well-known firm of Messrs. Robert Mole and Sons, Ltd., of Birmingham, whose patent bell mouthed scabbard is the most improved pattern. The scabbard is the same as the 1882 pattern, but the scabbard is made with wood to preserve the edge, and has fixed rings which are stronger, and do away with the objectionable noise of the loosening. In England, however, it is still a question whether the rings will be kept on the outside, or placed opposite each other just as in the 1882 pattern. A much needed improvement introduced by Messrs. Mole was a bearing for the little finger, filling up the angle in the old patterns; this improvement does not require a scabbard, just as before for the use of the finger. The old sword was made of steel, and the new sword is made of solid cutlass guard about 83 inches wide, pierced for lightness. The weight of the sword is about 21 $\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. The results of the new sword are very satisfactory, and the new sword is already used by the Sydney Lancers. The new sword will be regarded with great interest by the Sydney Lancers, as the new sword is supplied to the Sydney Lancers it is evident that the new sword is the best sword yet made, and from what is stated above that although their arrival

On Saturday, at about 11.40 a.m., a gentleman named Beke, over 70 years of age, was walking in King-street under the fenced-in boarding of certain houses being erected there, when a brick fell at his feet, apparently from the top of the buildings, fortunately without striking upon him. Had it done so he would probably have been killed. Three gentlemen who witnessed the occurrence spoke to Mr. Beke, and congratulated him on his providential escape.
